

From: joseph vanek [redacted]
Subject: KNIVES in HENS - Model Box.

Date: 21 August 2009 14:50:31 IST

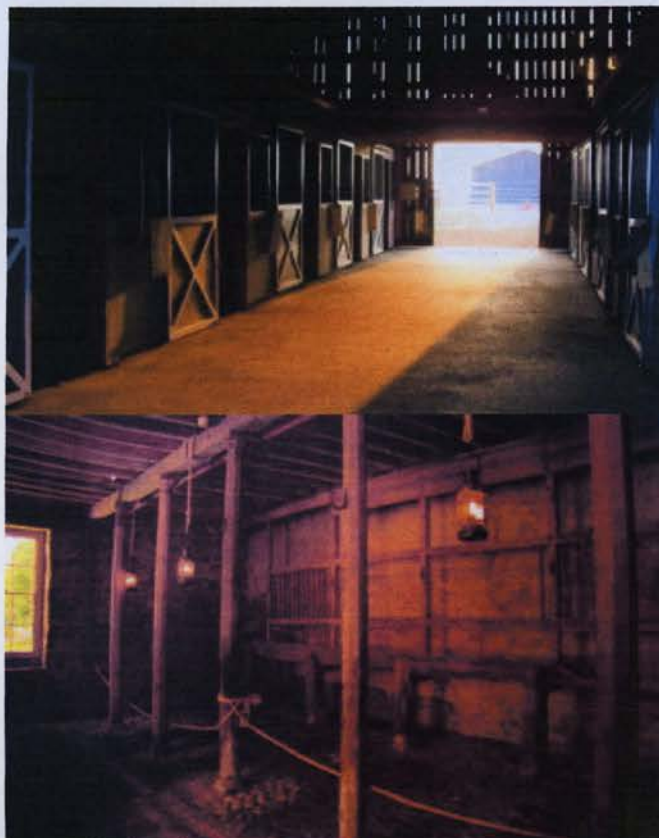

To: Alan Gilsenan [redacted]

4 Attachments, 171 KB Save Slideshow

Archive Collection: T26. Joe Vaněk Archiv

Ref No. 12615161002

Date Digitised: 01/10/2019

fac_stable_interior

IMG_3687.JPG

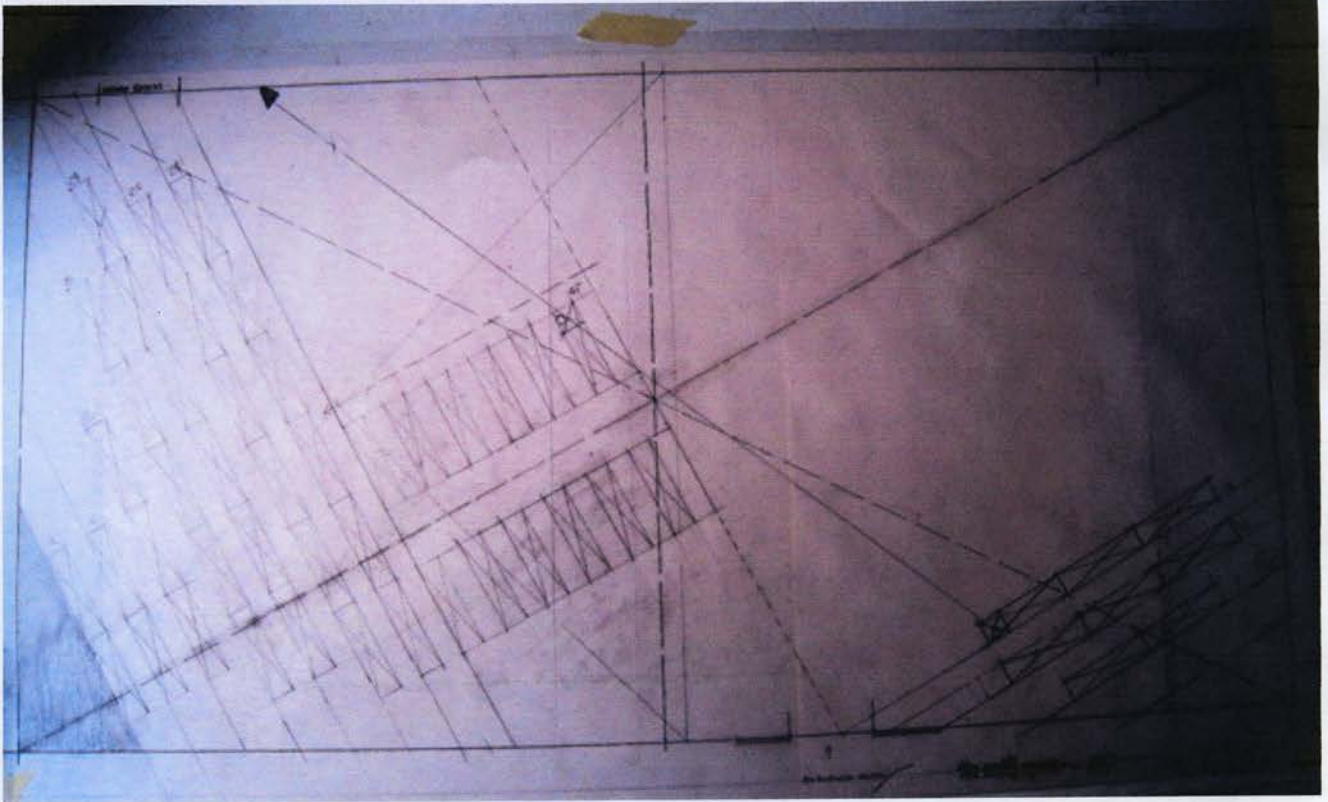

Archive Collection: T26. Joe Vaněk Archive

Ref No. T2615161002

Date Digitised: 01/10/2009

From: joseph vanek [redacted]
Subject: Ground plan (rough - provisional) KNIVES in HENS.
Date: 24 August 2009 16:20:46 IST
To: Alan Gilsenan [redacted]
1 Attachment, 121 KB Save Slideshow

Alan

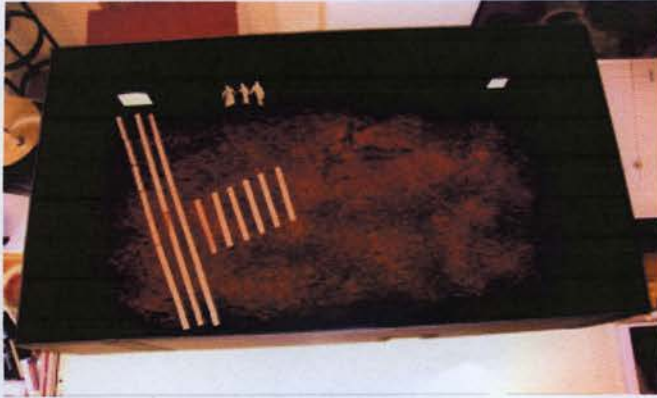

Here is a more considered version . The ' church ' seating is reduced to a block of 12 x 4 + central aisle. 48. The diagonal dotted line from the front indicates that it is equidistant from either wall with a .5cm variation only. The main block behind is made up of 120 seats and the remaining to the right of the entry make up 32 - ergo 200 ! Re these seats the diagonal line from the front left crossed seat to the back wall with the black arrow head indicates the sightline clearance across the upstage/ front end seat of the church seating - so, that long wall could be used to within 2 metres of the arched recess.

Re the church seating as the sight line from the corner seats is so good it could be raked but then we would have to put the main block of seats on risers whatever type of seats they were. Also the church seats placed centrally in the space (but not in relation to the main block) makes a bigger impact in relation to the environmental design I feel. I did move it up to be central with the seating block and it looked very odd and unbalanced.

Still a model will prove what works or not.
Your thoughts ?

I had a good meeting with Catherine and I am in Dublin until thursday morning, so I hope you get a moment to respond before I go to the UK.

All the best.

IMG_3684.JPG

central

200

what

All the best. . . . joe

IMG_3686.JPG

Archive Collection: T26. Joe Vaněk Archive

Ref No. T2615161002

Date Digitised: 01/10/2009

Alan - The configuration is a tad crude and there is no aisle BUT it does seat 108 souls - so we should manage

A diagonal couple of rows still might work to the right of the main entrance. It depends on how high the rake it and happens where the 3 figures are ?